ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

Dynamics of Globalisation (Global + Local) Indian Scenario

Globalisation means adopting the global standardized product or service according to the local market. The term Globalisation was first introduced by Dr. Theodore Levitt in Harvard Business Review in 1983. The concept emphasizes that the product or service will get acceptance only if it is customized for the locality or the culture in which it is sold.

At 1997 conference Robertson described the term Globalisation as the co-existence of both universalising and particularising tendencies of products or service. Today global brands are facing with numerous challenges including adaptation of product or services to the conditions viz socioeconomic cultural, political and technological environment as well as consumers' needs within a specific market. This brings the changing perspective from global to local which leads to Globalisation approach. Thus Globalisation encourages the businesses to think globally and act locally.

This conference is scheduled to provide a platform for interacting with learners, professionals, academicians and research centers. Thus the conference will help in providing awareness about a recent challenges, issues and strategies of the business at the Global as well as Local levels. However, following objectives can be focused:

1. Provide platform for exchanging the views of learners, teachers, research scholars, corporates and professionals.
2. Develop strategies & activities to popularize the term 'Make in India', in our country.
3. To share knowledge and experiences of corporate sector & structuring of syllabus of Under-Graduate and Post-Graduate levels.
4. To create opportunities for learners seeking research as a carrier for the further studies.
